

INSURGENTS MUST SURRENDER OR FIGHT

General Otis Refuses to Grant an Armistice.

Aguinaldo's Envoys Return to the Rebel Lines.

Native Confess They Are Whipped, But Desire to Obtain the Best Terms for Peace.

The following dispatch from General Otis was received by the Adjutant General this morning:

"Manila, April 29.—Conference with insurgent representatives terminated this morning. They requested cessation of hostilities three weeks, to enable them to call their congress to decide whether to continue prosecution of war or propose terms of peace. Proposition declined, and full amnesty promised on surrender. Believe insurgents tired of war, but seek to secure terms of peace through what they designate their representative congress.

"OTIS." "They're just sparring for time," is the way one War Department official put it, when today's news from the Philippines was received. He seems to express the general opinion. The fact that the second conference between General Otis and the Filipino envoys was barren of results does not seem to discourage him. It was not expected that the rebels would come to terms at once, or rather, surrender practically without terms, without a good deal of parleying. These negotiations may delay the inevitable result, it is believed, but they cannot prevent the final surrender. The frank admission alone of the Filipino commissioners that the rebels are whipped, and that they know it, is a guarantee for that. No instructions have been issued to General Otis from here.

The Administration has absolute confidence in him, and he has advisers who are thoroughly conversant with the views of the Administration. These advisers, the members of the Philippine Commission, are on the ground, and it seems as being consulted by General Otis. There is no necessity for home interference.

The firm conviction prevails that the situation will take care of itself. There may be another show of hostilities, but the lessons administered to the natives have been severe and but little if any more actual fighting is expected. The termination of the Philippine campaign will, it is thought, exercise a salutary effect on those Cubans who may have cherished a secret hope that rebellion against the United States Government would help their cause. A temporary success on the part of Aguinaldo might have been the signal for trouble in Cuba. That danger seems to be past.

A FRUITLESS CONFERENCE.

Rebel Proposition for an Armistice Rejected by General Otis. Manila, April 29.—The second conference between General Otis and the Filipino commissioners took place this morning and lasted three hours. It was without result. Admiral Dewey and Prof. Schurman, of the Philippine Commission, were present during the parley.

General Luna's envoys were Colonel Manuel Arguelles and Lieut. Jose Bernal. The Filipino officers simply renewed the request made yesterday for an armistice, but were granted only the Filipino congress could meet and act. They frankly admitted to General Otis that the Filipinos were whipped and knew it. Their contention was, however, that Aguinaldo, Luna, and other leaders had not the power to surrender without the sanction of their congress.

General Otis emphatically refused the request for an armistice on those conditions. The Americans, he said, did not and would not recognize the so-called Filipino congress or government. After a long parley, the meeting broke up and the Filipino commissioners returned to the rebel lines on the afternoon train.

While the two days' negotiations have thus far been barren of results, the best opinion in Manila both among the Americans and the prominent natives is that the incident is the beginning of the end. The Filipino envoys practically admitted that their army was in desperate straits and thoroughly whipped. It is believed that the Filipinos will now ask for further conferences, and that they will finally surrender on the best terms possible to obtain.

The only concession made by General Otis, during the conference was an offer of amnesty to the Filipinos conditional upon their complete surrender.

Prof. Schurman, President of the Philippine Commission, was interviewed today, and said:

"I regard the steps taken by the Filipinos as the beginning of the end. I believe in the personal sincerity of General Luna's envoys, though perhaps they are ignorant of the political machinations of their leaders. I expect, however, that the envoys will return with a new proposition."

TERMS OF SURRENDER.

Aguinaldo Wants Independence Under an American Protectorate. Madrid, April 29.—Senator Reyes, the Manila correspondent of a newspaper here, telegraphs that Aguinaldo will surrender to the Americans on the condition that the independence of the Philippines be recognized under an American protectorate.

English Officer's Overtures Rejected. Victoria, B. C., April 29.—News was brought here today by the steamer Olympia of the plucky attempt made by Lieutenant Commander Cowper, of the British gunboat Plover, to effect a settlement between the American authorities and natives at Panny. Cowper went into the Filipino lines and conferred with the rebel leaders. No settlement was arrived at, however, the natives saying they would stand by Aguinaldo and the Malolos government did.

FUNSTON FOR GOVERNOR.

Kansas Enthusiastic Over the Col. otis's Nomination.

Topeka, Kan., April 29.—For governor of Kansas in 1950, Col. Fred Funston. This ticket is not only a possibility, but a strong probability. The suggestion was made several weeks ago by one of the leading newspapers of Kansas. It struck a popular chord, and Colonel Funston's gubernatorial boom immediately assumed large proportions.

If he is ambitious for civic honors, there can be no question that he can have anything Kansas has to offer. His military achievements in the Philippine Islands have made him a State hero. The newspapers are full of his praises, and his heroic deeds constitute the one all-absorbing subject of conversation. At public gatherings the mere mention of his public is sufficient to set the audience wild.

According to present plans, if Colonel Funston will accept the nomination, Governor Stanley will step down gracefully with the understanding that he is to be sent to the United States Senate in 1931 to succeed the incumbent, Hon. Lucien Baker. If Colonel Funston should prefer the Senate, he can have it for the lower floor.

Several days ago one of the leading public men of Kansas addressed a communication to Colonel Funston appraising him of the situation. He stated that the people of Kansas have him at the head of State affairs and pledging him their hearty cooperation and support. A reply is not expected for several weeks unless it should come by cable.

IN ONE ROOM FOR SEVEN YEARS

A Wife Kept Close Prisoner by Her Husband.

Trenton, N. J., April 29.—The police are investigating charges made by Mrs. Emil Reddig that her husband has kept her confined in a room in their home on Whitaker Avenue for the past seven years.

The matter was brought to the attention of the police by neighbors, who noticed that the front of the house was always darkened. Health Officer McGalliard, accompanied by the police, went to the house in Reddig's absence and broke into the room in which Mrs. Reddig was lying on a bed.

The room was in a dreadful state of filth, and the woman begged to be taken to a hospital, saying her health had broken down from her husband's treatment. Reddig says his wife is insane and that she stayed in the room of her own will.

REPORTED SAFETY OF THE GILMORE PARTY

Lieutenant's Wife and Friends Rejoice Over the News.

Welcome Relief From the Agony of Suspense.

Navy Department Has Not Yet Received Official Confirmation of the Cablegram.

The cablegram from Manila, published exclusively in The Times this morning and announcing the safety of Lieut. J. C. Gilmore and the missing men of the Yorktown's crew, who were ambushed and captured by the insurgents at Baler, and are now held as prisoners of war, is considered by Lieutenant Gilmore's friends to be the best news received from the Philippines, since the tidings of Dewey's victory in Manila Bay.

To Mrs. Gilmore, who has been suffering the agonies of suspense and doubt since the news of the capture of her husband, the dispatch means hope and a prospective reunion.

When The Times reporter called at Mrs. Gilmore's residence this morning she had already seen the published cablegram, and with tears in her eyes expressed her thanks for the welcome tidings.

"Mrs. Gilmore's story shows the effects of the nervous strain under which she has been suffering for the past two weeks, and it was with an effort that she restrained her emotion during the interview."

"I have been waiting day by day to hear of my husband's fate through the Navy Department," she said. "Judge Advocate Lemly has promised to send me such word as he receives from Admiral Dewey, as soon as it has been translated. I have been waiting as patiently as I could for the past week, but I do not feel able to stand the thing—this waiting; one could almost wish to receive any news to be relieved from its agony. A half-dozen friends called this morning before breakfast to assure themselves that I had seen the article in The Times. I have received no word from the Navy Department to confirm the news, but I am sure it is true; I feel that it is so."

"The whole affair has been such a surprise to me," said Mrs. Gilmore. "I can scarcely control myself. When the lieutenant went to Manila I supposed he was perfectly safe, being on the hospital ship Solara. I do not know that he had been transferred to the Yorktown until I learned of his capture. The news has been so indefinite ever since, until this morning, that I have grown more nervous every day. I cannot tell you how glad I am to have grateful to The Times, for it has given me the first ray of hope since the reported calamity."

Assistant Secretary of the Navy, Allen said this morning that no word had come from Admiral Dewey and that no news had been received concerning the fate of Lieutenant Gilmore and the fourteen missing men of the Yorktown. "This," he said, "was said in discussing the news cable from Manila announcing that these men are safe, as prisoners in the hands of the Filipinos at Baler."

DEATH ROLL OF THE TORNADO.

Later Accounts Increase the Missouri Cyclone's Destructive List.

Chicago, April 29.—Fuller accounts of the disaster by the wind storms of Thursday show that the first reports were not exaggerated, as to the casualties or loss of property.

Kirkville, Mo., is by far the most severely afflicted community visited by the tornado or cyclone, which prevailed that day, and presents a list of killed and injured that is appalling. Thirty bodies have already been taken from the ruins, and eighty or more persons are injured, many of whom will die. Others are missing and may be reasonably included in the dead. The village of Newton, in Missouri, in which thirty houses were demolished, reports over ten dead and more than thirty injured.

Millan, another Missouri town, was visited by a furious wind storm and four families are said to have been wiped out of existence there, the property loss being heavy.

In Western Iowa, the tornado swept a path across Monona county, killing five persons outright, fatally injuring five, and inflicting dangerous injuries on a half dozen others who were more or less seriously injured.

The property losses at Kirkville will aggregate $200,000. At Aubrey, Iowa, the damage to property is heavy, but no definite estimate is furnished. According to the best information the storm originated in Nebraska, where it caused heavy damage.

Kirkville, Mo., 40 killed, 80 injured; Newton, Mo., 15 killed, 20 injured; Monona, Iowa, 5 killed, 15 injured; Brownlow, Mo., 4 injured.

MRS. GEORGE'S SENTIMENTS.

Varying Opinions Expressed Concerning Her Regretful.

Cincinnati, April 29.—The "Enquirer" this morning prints an interview with Mrs. George, acquitted of the murder of George D. Saxton at Canton, which many times throws out the inference that she killed Saxton, and has no regrets.

To the question: "Is there not a lesson to be drawn from your experience?" she replied: "I want to say that my misfortunes and bitter results should be a warning to designing men. Oh, if I could only go into every home and tell each wife, sister, or daughter, and warn them against trusting any man with their virtue. I would say to them that no man, however good he may seem, can be trusted with their dearest possessions. I would warn them to be careful of their associates; to guard themselves against this temptation that dragged me down."

"What effect, Mrs. George, do you think the verdict rendered will have upon the public?" "The verdict, I believe, will be accepted as a declaration that the home is a sacred place that cannot be violated with impunity. I feel that in the city of Canton and elsewhere in the country in general, the people stand by the woman who was wronged. I have had countless letters from all parts of the country upon that very subject. Many of them came from ministers of the gospel, and a number from women and girls. They were comforting in tone and offered me not only support but sympathy."

The "Enquirer" also prints an interview with Marshall Barber, who was the defendant in the case. He said: "The verdict was a relief to me. I had been waiting for it for a long time. I feel that I have been treated fairly. I am glad to see that the public is satisfied with the result. I am glad to see that the public is satisfied with the result. I am glad to see that the public is satisfied with the result."

"Judge Taylor's leaning toward the defense is a matter of common talk among all the reputable lawyers in Canton. A verdict of manslaughter would have been about right. The defense resorted to every means to win the case. They hired women to go about town, talking in behalf of the defendant, and they packed the courtroom with shouting supporters. I am glad to see that the public is satisfied with the result. I am glad to see that the public is satisfied with the result."

"I have been waiting for a long time to see the result of the trial. I am glad to see that the public is satisfied with the result. I am glad to see that the public is satisfied with the result. I am glad to see that the public is satisfied with the result."

Barber was asked what would be done if Mrs. George began a suit for a portion of George D. Saxton's estate.

"We would fight a case of that kind to the finish," he replied, "and there would be no let up on that woman. I say that if we did not fight her, she would mean a case of that sort, we would be cowards. There would be no mercy for this woman in that event. However, I do not anticipate such a suit."

The first dispatch was sent to the President by the German Emperor and reads as follows:

"Weisbaden, April 28, 1899. 'The Imperial Postmaster General has just informed me that Your Excellency has kindly given your consent to the laying of a cable between the shores of the United States. "His Imperial and Royal Majesty, Wilhelm II, Weisbaden, April 28, 1899. 'I have received with pleasure Your Majesty's telegram regarding the laying of a cable between the United States and German ports. It afforded me sincere gratification to give consent to the laying of this new cable on the shores of the United States, and the more so as I see therein an opportunity to further the high mission of international telegraphy in drawing closer the distant nations and bringing their peoples into more intimate association, in the interests of mutual advantage, good-will and amity. That the new cable will prove an additional bond between the two countries is my fervent wish and hope.'—WILLIAM MCKINLEY."
